COMPANY MUST PAY DAMAGES

court in Provo awarded Black $10,000

firmed this action.

The case is one in which Black, who was employed as a lineman at Provo, sued the company for $20,000. According to the allegations made in his coming to the allegations made in his complaint he was at work on the cross arm of a pole when a wire that he was handling came in contact with a heavily charged wire of the electric light company, and he was thrown from the pole to the ground, twenty-five feet below. He sustained injuries he alleged that were permanent and caused him to lose the ability to do work. He set forth that it was through negligence forth that it was through negligence on the part of the company that the accident occurred. He claimed that he was not warned of the danger and that was not warned of the danger and that due precautions were not taken by the company to prevent such an acledent. When the case was tried before the Provo court the defendant claimed that it was either the negligence of Black in not using his safety strap or it was the carelessness of a fellow workman that caused the accident and not their negligence. The jury held that Black showed no negligence for failing to use his safety strap because it was not necessary on a cross arm, and they also held that the carelessness was not on the part of a fellow workman. The supreme court sustained the lower one in each of these points. The opinion was written by Judge C. J. Baskin and curred in by Judges Bartch and M.

Grande Railway Company. In Judge Stewart's court yesterday the case of Emma McVey et al., versus the Rio Grande railway for damages for the death of her hysband, John B. McVey, was heard and the plaintiff was awarded judgment for $1.250.

The complaint sets forth that on May 27, 1903, the plaintiff's husband was crossing the Rio Grande tracks near Second South and Sixth West streets when an engine ran into him and killed him. It was claimed that the com-pany engineer failed to sound the whistle or warn the victim of his danages and costs of the suit. The amount mentioned above was granted her and Two Boys Wounded in Street Brawl ployment Agencies.

Police After Bill Board Men and Employment Agencies.

A crusade has been started by the police department against advertising firms about the city who own bill-beards. There is an ordinance that provides that all bill-boards shall be situated at least ten feet back from the sidewalk and shall clear the ground by at least two feet, so as to give an unobstructed view underneath.

Acting Chief Hennel stated yesterday that there were very few bill-boards in the city that were built in accordance with the ordinance, and said that steps were being taken to make the advertisers abide by the law. Today warrants will be issued against several of the offenders and an effort will be made to make them comply with the law.

Several days ago the various employment agencies of the city were notified that they must move their offices from saloons, in accordance with an ordinance that was passed by the council a short time ago. Tomorrow the time alloted for these people to move will have expired and any violators caught after that time will be arrested.

Orson P. Arnold, jr., assistant superintendent of the Consolidated Railway & Power company, celebrated the thirtieth anniversary of his connection with the company hast evening by a troiley party. Two carloads of officials and employes and other invited guests were taken on a ride about the city with a stop at Calder's, where refreshments were served. The affair was to some extent a celebration of Mr. Arnold's 42nd birthday, which took place Sunday.

Mr. Arnold entered the service of the company as a water-carrier when he was a boy of 12 years. He was later promoted, being given a position to change mules on the different relays for the mule cars. Then he got to work as a driver and continued to forge ahead until he became assistant to his father, who was then superintendent of the road. He has remained assistant superintendent for a number of years.
